Dear Mr. Davis:

For many years we have worked together addressing issues of importance to the Company as well as your members. We have had open communications and have embraced a collaborative relationship in resolving these issues. Continuing with this approach will be important as we work through the challenges and opportunities that these talks will present. Our constructive relationship is vital to our providing excellence and value to our customers, employees, and shareholders.

Per our earlier discussion, the exchange of letters on the first day of negotiations, provides notice to open discussion on the items listed. We propose discussion on these topics and will entertain other subjects that may be appropriate. Topics listed may not constitute all proposals that may be introduced in negotiations.

We are confident that with open discussion, thorough analysis, and commitment to our future success we will reach a mutually acceptable agreement.

Sincerely,

W. Pat Branch
